FREW & CAMPBELL,

TUESDAY, JANUARY 14, 1879.

National Bank Statistics The annual report of John J. Knox, Comptroller of the Currency, which is just published, with the regular appendix, furnishes some interesting figures concerning the capital and dividends of the National Banks of the country. The following abstracts show the number of banks in the principal cities, their capital and dividends, and the ratio of their dividends to capital, for the six months from March

The total includes both tables-the cities and the States. For the correspond-ing months in 1870, the ratio of dividend to capital was 5 per cent; in 1871 it was the same; in 1872 it was 5.1 per cent; in 1873 it was the same, and also in 1874; in 1875 the ratio fell to 4.9 per cent, and in 1876 to 4.5, being the same in 1877; so that the fall of the last year to 3.81 shows that the banking system was less profitable in 1878 than for the eight preceding years. It will be seen above that Detroit is the best city, and Oregon the best State for dividends on bank stock.
